

What would it be like to live in a country that by definition does not make a distinction between 'synagogue and state'?

Just decades ago, David Ben Gurion publicly declared "the establishment of a Jewish state... to be known as the State of Israel." But what does it mean to be a Jewish state? Do these two characterizations, 'democratic state' and 'Jewish state', work well together? What happens when they don't?

Faces of Israel explores the delicate balance between state and religion in the Jewish homeland through the context of marriage.

The documentary poses questions, such as:

- How, if at all, should Jewish tradition influence Israeli law?
- Should the Chief Rabbinate represent the views of all denominations of Judaism?
- Should civil unions and same-sex unions be legalized in Israel?

Faces of Israel introduces the viewer to Israelis from a variety of backgrounds and beliefs who offer their own answers to these questions.

Faces of Israel has no political agenda. Rather, it serves as an educational tool that will foster dialogue and conversation about the important questions that face the Jewish people and the State of Israel today.

Scene selection | Extras Feature: Meet the Faces | Running time approx. 74 min.

For more information, log on to www.facesthemovie.com

© 2009

faces of israel

A Discussion about Marriage, State & Religion in the Jewish Homeland OPPENHEIMER faces

of israel

A Discussion about Marriage, State & Religion in the Jewish Homeland

A documentary by Amy Beth Oppenheimer

